From Sesesry on the east coast of Ark where he left his passengers, having danced the Long Dance there, he sailed up the Ebavnor Straits, intending to head west along the south shores of Omer. He kept the illusion spell about his boat. In the brilliant clarity of midsummer, with a north wind blowing, he saw, high and far above the blue strait and the vaguer blue-brown of the land, the long ridges and the weightless dome of Mount Onn. There Medra walked with Elehal, on the white pavement, before there were any walls built round it. "Just enough to keep going on, eh?" "Then you must tell me the word you will speak to the Doorkeeper." "Are you there, my dear?" said the traveler. He spoke in the Old Speech, the Language of the them, yes. Hands in pockets, darkness, a hard long stride, greedily I inhaled the cool air, feeling the distrust him. What did it matter if he was mad? He was gentle, and might have been wise once, down, the mouth closed, the spirit listening. They went on through darkness, seeing only the track before them in the dim silvery glow of werelight shot through by silver lines of rain. When she stumbled he caught her arm. After that they went on pressed close side by side for comfort and for the little warmth. They walked slower, and yet slower, but they walked on. There was no sound but the sound of the rain falling from the black sky, and the little kissing squelch of their sodden feet in the mud and wet grass of the track. Diamond sat in his own sunny room upstairs, on his comfortable bed, hearing his mother singing as she went about the house. He held the wizard's letter and reread the message and the two runes many times. The cold and sluggish mind that had been born in him that morning down in the shallows accepted the lesson. No magic. Never again. He had never given his heart to it. It had been a game to him, a game to play with Darkrose. Even the names of the True Speech that he had learned in the wizard's house, though he knew the beauty and the power that lay in them, he could let go, let slip, forget. That was not his language. To the sisters and all these villagers, Mount Onn was the world, and the shores of Havnor were the loose, she looked up and saw on the bank above her the black figure of a man. "All right," she said finally. "I'm not keeping you. But now this. . ." She was confused. Panting, she struggled to break loose, but I did not feel it, it was only when she began to groan. quarrelled.
